

The Correspondence Problem

- One of the major problem in computer vision is finding image points that correspond to the same 3D point in a scene. In the field, this is known as the correspondence problem.
- There is no easy solution – The best we can do is use heuristic to find points that are likely to correspond.